Chris Christie
"Tells it like it is"

Chris Christie, the governor of New Jersey, is known for his candid and often blunt remarks. In a recent interview, he stated, "I tell it like it is. I don't sugarcoat anything. I don't mince words. I don't beat around the bush. I just say what I think, and I think that's the only way to get things done."

Christie's straightforward approach has earned him a reputation as a no-nonsense leader. He has faced criticism for his harsh language, but he remains steadfast in his belief that honesty is the best policy. "I've been in politics for a long time, and I've learned that the only way to win is to be real. You can't hide behind a facade of politeness. You have to be authentic, and you have to be willing to stand up for your beliefs, even if it means saying things that some people might not like to hear."

Christie's candidness has also been a source of inspiration for many. He has encouraged his staff to speak the truth and to not be afraid of controversy. "I want to see a government that is transparent and accountable. I want to see a government that is not afraid to say what it needs to say. I want to see a government that is not afraid to take the tough decisions that are necessary to get things done."

NEW HAMPSHIRE, N.J. — Sen. Mitt Romney (R-Mass.) and Sen. Marco Rubio (R-Fla.) were the only Republican candidates to appear on the New Hampshire ballot in the 2016 presidential election. But the state's voters were not given a choice between the two. Instead, they were given a choice between the two and a third candidate, Sen. Ted Cruz (R-Texas), who was not on the ballot. The result was a narrow victory for Sen. Cruz, who won the state's electoral votes by a margin of just 1,000 votes.
